Commissioner of Education Visits CES

Dr. Candace McQueen, Commissioner of Education for the state of Tennessee, visited Clinton Elementary School on Monday, March 27 as part of her "Classroom Chronicles" tour. Clinton City Schools was slated on her first day of spring school tours focusing on early literacy in elementary schools. Our system is a recipient of a state grant called "Read to Be Ready." The professional development and instructional materials provided in this grant are part of the state vision of achieving a 75% proficiency rate in Reading by 3rd grade.

During her visit, Dr. McQueen visited several classrooms including Kindergarten, First Grade, Fifth Grade and Sixth Grade. She observed shared reading, interactive read alouds, writing, vocabulary, and student engagement through Chrome Books. Afterwards, she met with school and district leadership in the library to discuss the CCS literacy framework and asked what supports schools needed from Tennessee State Department of Education to continue moving the needle in literacy. While talking to a reporter, Dr. McQueen stated, "It is exactly what we had hoped would be happening. Most impressive, is how the school district has created their own vision of the state's vision with a local group of talented educational leaders that have already bought into the state's goals and laid the foundation for building better reading proficiency in schools. There has to be a foundation or framework in place for best practices and changes to occur. Clinton City Schools already has that framework in place." While exiting the door, Dr. McQueen stated that she would like to come back and highlight some of the best practices that she observed in her visit.

Dr. McQueen has been Commissioner of Education for approximately a year and a half. During this time, she has made a conscious effort to listen to a variety of stakeholders and use relevant data to make decisions for education in Tennessee. Her focus on children is evident by her interactions during classroom visits. Talking with the students is her main priority in school visits, and she is often seen kneeling down smiling and laughing with children. She has made early literacy one of her priorities, and Clinton City Schools appreciates her taking the time to see our practices in action.

AES First to Initiate First Book program

Andersonville Elementary School (AES) staff members realize education requires a partnership with our students, parents, and community. Recently, AES became the first Anderson County School to initiate the First Book digital library program using the Open eBooks iOS and android app. This corporately funded program provides access to thousands of digital books suitable for elementary school students through the New York City library and is free of charge to Title I schools.

The identification and login code for every AES student is supplied to his or her parents and provides years of access to the elementary school book collection. Headed by AES staff members, parent meetings, held after school hours, furnish training in the purpose and use of the app. Unlike personal devices which can be accessed without an internet connection, the First Book program, using the Open eBooks app, provides one way our AES staff partners with parents to meet the literary needs of every child every day.

Summer Bridge Learning Program

The Summer Bridge Learning Program is another way AES promotes Parent and Community Involvement. This program helps keep AES students involved in learning activities throughout the summer break. Parents of student participants purchase, at a significantly reduced price, a summer workbook designed to review state educational standards in language arts, math, science, and social studies. Through this program, parents encourage their children to complete short daily assignments. Data gathered after the first year of this program indicates that most students who complete the program avoided educational regression during the summer break. Several students who were unable to purchase books were provided with books through the generosity of other students and AES supporters.

A special aspect of the Summer Bridge Learning Program involves community partners who provide weekly incentives for students who complete an assigned portion of the workbook. Participation in this aspect of the program is voluntary and designed to support the extra efforts of our students and their parents. Students who complete the workbook are eligible to win prizes during a drawing held at a special school assembly in the fall. Prizes for the drawing are provided by several community partners and individual supporters of AES.

Community partners who supported our Summer Bridge Learning Program included: Andersonville Post Office, Chunky Monkey Ice Cream Shop, Fox Toyota, Junior Achievement, Meadow View Senior Living, Museum of Appalachia, Norris Community Library, Pizza Plus, Ray Varner Ford, Sharp's Hardware, and Valero. We also had generous, anonymous donors who helped provide some end of program prizes. We are thankful for support from anonymous donors and community partners and look forward to a long relationship with them. As the Summer Bridge Learning Program expands, we welcome new community partner relationships and look forward to working with them on behalf of AES students.

The Andersonville Elementary School staff is proud to support initiatives which highlight educational partnerships and focus on EVERY CHILD EVERY DAY... in and out of school.

“We Can Change How Smart We Are!”

Changing Growth Mindsets at Andersonville Elementary!

School culture has been a focus at Andersonville Elementary School for several years. Educating the whole child is a philosophy embraced by the staff. Last year, and continuing this year, Andersonville Elementary School launched a school-wide initiative revolving around increasing student motivation and effort by fostering a growth mindset with the students. Fostering a growth mindset is based on the research of Dr. Carol Dweck. Individuals with a growth mindset believe they can change how smart they are through utilizing non-cognitive factors when faced with personal and academic challenges. Students and staff that develop a growth mindset within themselves are able to face personal and academic challenges in a more constructive and effective manner by utilizing non-cognitive factors.

The staff introduced, educated and reinforced non-cognitive factors such as resilience, perseverance, grit, self-control, respect and responsibility to the students with the intent of impacting student attitudes and academic achievement. The methods and strategies our school utilized throughout the year included; growth mindset mini lessons delivered to all students, six character traits introduced to the school body through special assemblies, character trait videos featuring the staff, teacher brags of students during weekly assemblies reinforcing character traits, bulletin boards reflecting growth mindset student work, targeted classroom read alouds reinforcing the character traits, praise to students for effort, consistent growth mindset posters used school wide and home-school connections with parents through newsletters on the growth mindset initiative. The special growth mindset character trait assemblies are the heart of the initiative. During these special assemblies, the students are provided a definition of the character trait, shown a video clip related to the trait, individual students recognized by teachers providing peer examples of the trait, staff featured videos acting out the trait, and a chant off between students and staff.

In the first year of the initiative, we conducted a survey in the fall and spring. The statements the students responded to were: Everyone Can Learn New Things, Some Kids are Born Smarter Than Others, and We Can Change How Smart We Are. The survey we used came from a resource written by education consultant and author, Mary Cay Ricci. By the spring, all three survey statements reflected an increase in a growth mindset belief system in student responses. The most significant change was a 10% increase in the belief of the students to the statement, We Can Change How Smart We Are. This data provides evidence that the growth mindset initiative is indeed impacting student attitudes, work ethic and how they are approaching academic challenges throughout the school day!

Several other Anderson County elementary schools have contacted Andersonville Elementary School about our growth mindset initiative and are now implementing the concept in their schools as well. In the fall of 2016, Andersonville Elementary School was invited to present at the SCORE (State Collaborative on Reforming Education) Summit Conference in Nashville, Tennessee, where one of the topics we discussed with the audience was the growth mindset initiative.

Edible Moons

If you visit Mrs. Tammy Pack's 4th grade class at NCES, you will see students integrating Science and Social Studies into their reading class. Recently, students were working to analyze the patterns, relative movements, and relationships among the sun, moon, and Earth. The learning outcome of the lesson was for students to organize the phases of the moon in the correct sequence and infer that the moon's phases are caused by the revolution of the moon and Earth around the sun. Students rotated through 7 learning centers which included creating their own moon phase flash cards, chalk drawings of the moon phase cycle, moon phase flap books, moon phase "motion" booklet, a discovery basket, and a teacher table. The culminating activity was edible!!! The students used Oreo cookies to construct the phases of the moon. In order for this activity to be considered a success, students had to place the phases in the correct order, describe the phase, and the cause of the various phases. Afterwards, the students were rewarded by eating all their hard work! Who would want to pass up such a "treat" to learn about moon phases! CCS makes learning fun!!!

CCS Receives Fitness Grant from Education Foundation

The Education Foundation for Clinton City and Anderson County Schools awarded two grants to Clinton City Schools to support Physical Education programs in all three schools. The competitive grants were funded from the proceeds of the Clinton 5K & 1 Mile Fun Run on October 22, 2016. A total of approximately $4,428 in grants were awarded in Clinton City and Anderson County Schools. The purpose of these grants is to initiate, maintain, or continue health and wellness activities for students. Terri Kerley, PE teacher at Clinton Elementary, won a set of Math and Movement mats for addition and subtraction. Leslie Tumblin, PE teacher at North and South Clinton Elementary Schools, won an American Ninja Obstacle Course. The Education Foundation recognized the recipients at the Annual Teacher of the Year Banquet.

The Education Foundation began sponsoring the Clinton 5K & 1 Mile Fun Run with the intent of developing a funding source, through competitive grants, for schools to directly impact the health and wellness programs and activities in our community schools.

The 6th Annual Clinton 5K & 1 Mile Fun Run is scheduled for October 21, 2017 in downtown Clinton. All proceeds from the race will be utilized for the Education Foundation competitive grants. For more information, please visit <http://www.theeducationfoundation.info> or <http://www.clinton5k.com>.

Innovation Academy: A Hidden Gem

Innovation Academy is Anderson County Schools' online program for high school students. There are three different programs in Innovation Academy. The first program is Bridge Academy, where students who are behind can earn credits to catch up and graduate with their cohort. The second program is Opportunity Credits. Students in Opportunity Credits can either complete Credit Recovery to earn credit for a course they previously failed, or take a class which doesn't fit into their schedule on campus. The third program is the Anderson County Online Learning Academy, or ACOLA. These students are home-based learners and work on their curriculum at home with the supervision of our certified teachers. ACOLA students may take all classes online, or may participate in on-campus classes. ACOLA students have taken on-campus classes such as ROTC, band, digital arts, cosmetology, culinary arts, and welding. ACOLA staff, students and parents have a class meeting bi-monthly. Students Anna, Caitlyn, Shelby, Bryce, and Dawson are shown at the April meeting. Jared Forgety of the Life Development Center led the students in team-building exercises which stressed cooperation and working together.

SCES STEM Night

Thursday, March 2nd marked the very first STEM (science, technology, engineering, and math) family night at South Clinton Elementary. Students and families were invited to come for dinner in the cafeteria to begin the evening. All SCES students were invited to eat for free, and family members could get a hot dog, chips, a drink, and a dessert for $1.00. The Clinton High School robotics team was set up in the gym where they had several different stations set up for students. They also reserved an area of the gym for demonstrations with robots and invited students to play a game. Many of the students on the robotics team are Clinton City Schools alumni!

Each grade level had two different sessions where families could come in and complete a STEM activity. The first session took place from 6:00-6:30, and the second session was from 6:30-7:00. Each grade level team of teachers researched and planned their own unique STEM activity. Some of the activities included building catapults, building nests, finding the perfect amount of water to flip a water bottle using fractions, finding the best strategy for building a structure using plastic cups, and many more fun activities!

Mrs. Schlandt also had the book fair open during STEM night. Students and families had the opportunity to come in and browse the selection of books, posters, and accessories in between STEM sessions. Many families headed home with new books to read together as a family. The participation in our first STEM Family Night was exceptional. It is our goal this annual opportunity will spark students' interest in the various STEM careers.
